

American Periodicals Series

AMERICAN PERIODICALS SERIES (APS) includes digitized images of the pages of American magazines and journals published from colonial days to the dawn of the 20th century. Titles range from Benjamin Franklin's General Magazine and America's first scientific journal, Medical Repository; popular magazines such as Vanity Fair and Ladies' Home Journal; regional and niche publications; and groundbreaking journals like The Dial, Puck, and McClure's.

APS chronicles the development of America across 150 years. APS is suitable for all types of researchers, whether online novices or information professionals. Because the database contains digitized images of periodical pages, researchers can see all of the original typography, drawings, graphic elements, and article layouts exactly as they were originally published.

"I have been very impressed with APS. Its inclusion of popular periodicals as well as the premier literary and cultural journals of the period make it particularly valuable."

– Sharon Harris, Professor Emerita at University of Connecticut

about.proquest.com

To talk to the sales department, contact us at 1-800-779-0137 or sales@proquest.com.

THE JOURNALS IN THIS COLLECTION COVER THREE BROAD PERIODS:

- 89 journals published between 1740 and 1800 offer insights into America's transition from colonial times to independence. The journals support research for a range of academic fields. Titles include Massachusetts Magazine, which published America's first short stories, and Thomas Paine's Pennsylvania Magazine, which reported on inventions. One of the first mass printings of the Declaration of Independence, a letter by George Washington on the crucial Battle of Trenton, and the thoughts of Benjamin Franklin are among the highlights of content from this period.
- The first 60 years of the 19th century became the golden age of American periodicals, with general interest magazines, children's publications, and more than 20 journals for women. Many of the publications reflect on the growing debate over slavery, including the serialization of Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin in National Era that preceded the novel. Also available are hard-to-find materials, such as Edgar Allan Poe's contributions to the Southern Literary Messenger, as well as the first appearances of Nathaniel Hawthorne's stories in New England Magazine, and Margaret Fuller's contributions to the Dial.
- 118 periodicals published during the Civil War (1861–1865) and Reconstruction (1865–1877) eras reflect the nation in turmoil and growth, and titles from the 1880s through 1900 capture the settling of the West and the emergence of modern America. Early professional journals, including Publications of the American Economic Association and Proceedings of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, popular titles such as Scribner's and Lippincott's issued by publishing houses, celebrations of Americana in Ladies' Home Journal, and the incisive political and social commentary of Puck and McClure's illustrate the variety of the American experience.

ENGAGE YOUR FULL PROQUEST COLLECTION!

Cross-search with other digital primary-source content on the ProQuest platform including historical newspapers, magazine archives and government documents for an expanded field of inquiry.

YOU MIGHT ALSO BE INTERESTED IN...

American Periodicals from the Center for Research Libraries

Through an innovative partnership, ProQuest and the Center for Research Libraries (CRL), a consortium of North American universities, colleges and independent research libraries, are offering full-colour, digital access to a broad range of American periodicals. American Periodicals from the Center for Research Libraries contains full-text and full-colour scans of journal content that can be cross-searched with American Periodicals Series, ProQuest Historical Newspapers, and many other leading collections from ProQuest.

Speak to your Sales Specialist for more information about American Periodicals Series!

about.proquest.com

To talk to the sales department, contact us at 1-800-779-0137 or sales@proquest.com.

ProQuest®